Some Internships have Fast-Approaching Deadlines!

New Internship!

U.S. Naval Observatory Library
Astronomical Internship Opportunity for those interested in History, Knowledge Management & more, Washington, DC
Suitable for Hodson funding and the first time this opportunity has been available!

The USNO library is one of the largest astronomical libraries in the world and contains some of the oldest copies of St. John’s favorites from Galileo, Newton and Copernicus. This would be a really nice opportunity for any St. John’s student who is interested in history, history of science, rare books, archives, knowledge management, astronomy, physics, and/or library and museum studies.

The following are just some of the types of projects available:

- Working with 19th and 20th century historic manuscript material related to astronomical observing
- Building databases for information management
- Learning and implementing basic rare book preservation techniques
- Designing rare book and archival displays for USNO

Application deadline: March 15, 2020
To apply send your resume and cover letter to: Morgan Aronson, Librarian, US Naval Observatory Library: morgan.aronson@navy.mil; 202-762-1463. You may also contact Ms. Aronson if you have any questions.
