At the intersection of Native American, Hispanic and Anglo cultures, the 400-year-old city of Santa Fe offers a stimulating environment for visitors to explore. Applauded for its food, art, shopping, architecture, and outdoor life, Santa Fe was named the best small city in America by Condé Nast's Traveler magazine in 2014.

The high desert city of Santa Fe is situated in the foothills of the majestic 12,000-foot Sangre de Christo Mountains, along the Rio Grande. At an elevation of 7,000 feet, Santa Fe enjoys 320 sunny days per year and clear blue skies. Set high in the hills of the city's east side, St. John's College is located only three miles from the historic downtown Plaza and is within walking distance of four major museums and the famous Canyon Road art gallery district.

What follows are transportation options, entertainment venues, museums, restaurants, local accommodations, and more to help plan your trip to Santa Fe, or as it is affectionately called, The City Different. This compilation is provided by St. John's College as a convenience to our visitors, is not exhaustive, and should not be considered an endorsement of any business that is listed.

Also note that prices are subject to seasonal changes and may be discounted by various memberships. General tourist information may be obtained from the Santa Fe Convention and Visitor's Bureau.

If you are not used to living at altitude, it's recommended that you spend your first days in Santa Fe staying hydrated by drinking plenty of water and not engaging in strenuous physical activity.
